I don't think this will ever stop until we have an all-out war.

Much more severe negative side effects will certainly be the signs of a sensitive response, and therefore could be stayed away from.

If Microsoft had gone to the effort to make the program user-friendly, or even had a microgram of aesthetic sense, maybe I would think it worth the effort.

For example, the model and make of the auto will have a massive bearing on the price tag.
